to the somewhat threadbare artifices which she employed with the object of striking up a conversation. But by mere chance he had been reading a recently published memoir of his old friend. Valentine Baker Pasha, and the effect of this was to call to his mind the very common practices of adventuresses in Europe, to take advantage of the Old World system of railroad compartments to blackmail susceptible and unprotected male travelers. Thanks to this he declined to make any response to the advances of the lady and continued to tranquilly smoke his cigar as if entirely oblivious to her blandishments.

It was fortunate that he adopted this policy. For just before the next station was reached, which is the only stopping place between King's Cross and Hatfield she suddenly tore her hat and as the train came to a standstill put her head out of the window and shrieked for assistance. The guard and other railroad officials, as well as passengers, hurried to the scene and then the lady asserted that she had been terribly insulted by the prince, who was the only other person in the compartment. He did not stir from his seat, but continued tranquilly smoking his cigar.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Lancaster, Va., November 13.—Federal complications are likely to result in consequence of the recent action of Constable John Haynle, of White Chapel district of this county, in attaching the gasolene engine on the boats that carries the mail from Irvington and other points on the north side of the Rappahannock River to Urbanna.

It was perhaps this extraordinary calmness on his part which led the railroad officials to hesitate a moment before collaring him, and the stationmaster exclaimed, "What have you to say to this charge?" Hampden-Sidney Will Marked Improvement Against William and Mary.

Hampden-Sidney, Va., November 18.—
Hampden-Sidney is showing big improvement in offensive work, and Coach Bernice expects his men to show William and Mary some real interference in Saturday's game. In to-day's scrimmage against the scrubs, the varsity mage against the screen, the value, practically swept them off their feet.

The whole backfield is beginning to work like a well-oiled machine. Pendleton Vorke and VcClung went through the line and around the ends for substantial gains. Rennie, a new man to Venable Field, is improving every day, and is pressing the other backfield candidates hard for a berth on the team. His running in open field is sensational, and with a little
